News

☑ SpagoBI 2.3 Demo

SpagoBI 2.3 Demo, released on 16th October, is available here.
Download it for free and try it now!

☑ Spagic 3.0 Release Candidate available now

Spagic 3.0 Release Candidate was released on 22nd October 2009. It is available here!
This new version offers an innovative approach to the governance of middleware services, based on an OSGi Service Platform. It also allows the execution of SOA applications through Universal Middleware, which is highly modular and configurable around an OSGi kernel. The Universal Middleware model offers a new development process which gives real answers to the increasing complexity of the architectural specifications, to reusability and to the management of various components lifecycle. Spagic 3.0 increased modularity allows users to realize extensible solutions, which are now more adaptable to the various applicative contexts.

Events

☑ Spagic 3 RoadShow

Location: Milan - Rome (Italy)

Date: 24th-25th 2009

The new version of Spagic, the Open Source Universal Middleware, was presented to Engineering Group members in Milan on 24th November and in Rome on 25th November.

We would be pleased to organize further presentations for those enterprises, organizations, research laboratories and users that wish to learn more about Spagic. Contact spagic AT eng.it.

☑ fOSSa Conference 2009

Location: Grenoble, France

Date: 17th-18th November 2009

Engineering sponsored the fOSSa (Free/Open Source Software Academia) Conference, co-organised by INRIA and OW2 Europe Local Chapter.

According to participants, the event has proved to be a successful initiative and a useful occasion to exchange and improve one's knowledge on open source software and on the benefits coming from the collaboration between industry and academia. In particular, SpagoBI and Spago4Q projects were presented during both the main session and the workshop one. The presentations of the event are available here.
